BROTHERS SEIZED AND CHARGED WITH NEGRO FLOGGING

THREATS OF MARTIAL LAW WILL NOT BE CARRIED OUT.

FEAR NO REVOLT

Peace Officers Can Handle Situation, Is Belief of Authorities.

Macon, Ga. — Threats of martial law in Macon, owing to outrages against the negroes of Bibb and adjoining counties, will not be carried out. Three brothers, white men, are under arrest accused of the floggings and murder of negroes.
Adjutant General Cox and General Russell, head of the Georgia National guard, held a conference over the Bibb outrages, and came to the conclusion that the peace officers could handle the situation.
There is no danger of a negro uprising, though the colored people of Macon and vicinity have been under fear of death and flogging for the last three weeks. Outbreaks of lawlessness such as have not been known since the days of the original Ku Klux Klan have followed one another in rapid succession in the past few weeks.
Houma and Blackley counties were the scenes of lynchings in the past 10 days.
The captured men, E. T. Hudson, C. T. Hudson, and J. C. Hudson, were taken last Sunday night after they had been seized, officers said, while in the act of flogging two negroes.
The capture of the trio is said to be due to the daring work of a negro, who was seen to get into a car to pull from an automobile to whip him.
Another negro was whipped by the trio a few minutes before it was taken.
When one of the men jumped onto the running board of the negro's automobile he was stopped and the stop was made. The white man in the car whistled for his brothers to join him, but before they could do so the big automobile was plunged into an embankment.

The 200 armed soldiers under command of Adj. Gen. D. H. Markham, who has been served with notice to appear in court to show why an injunction against the opposition to his administration of the military government would be made more stringent.
Twelve arrests have been made in connection with various floggings.
Allegations of the Tulsa police in flogging and abetting the flogging of Nathan Hamman brought the troops into Tulsa.
Persons passing the scene in other cars, who were not allowed to stop, immediately 20 men, the anti-flogging squad, were on the way.
The sheriff's force reported that the Hudsons had given them considerable trouble in recent years.
Because of the past record of the Hudsons, it was learned at the sheriff's office an hour after the arrests, an investigation is being made to determine if the Hudsons are receiving a certain amount of money for each flogging.
Sheriff Hicks stated that revolvers which the negro said the men had, apparently were thrown away during the excitement.

WITH THE FARMERS

Farm Bureau Official Information

TOBACCO HARVEST WORK IS STARTED

Southern Crop Superior to Northern Say Tobacco Experts.

Harvest work has started on the tobacco crop in the southern part of the state, the best that this district has produced in recent years.

Leaf experts declare that the tobacco grown in the southern part of the state is superior to the tobacco grown in the northern part and should bring good prices in most instances. Tobacco growers in the southern part have been favored by weather conditions. There were no heavy winds or damaging hail storms when the crop was in the advanced stage.

The tobacco is well grown-out, ready of good spread and in the forms of the tobacco mon. "a real good binder crop."

There is little damage by blight, hail or worms evident in Rock county crops and but a few cases of mildew are getting into the fields.

A recent survey shows considerable more acreage in tobacco than last year. The campaign for the growers to raise quality tobacco instead of quantity with premium prices being paid for good tobacco has been successful. The tobacco used this year in the southern belt to raise binders instead of seedling stock. This together with better care and favorable rains has produced improved tobacco.

The wet weather Monday interfered with the shedding work. Next week will see tobacco harvesting in full swing.

"I have not seen the northern fields but understand from the buyers and others, southern Wisconsin produced this year as good a quality of tobacco as there is in the United States," says Arthur J. Jorgensen, manager of the Eber, Arthur Jorgensen Tobacco Pool. "It has always been contended that the southern belt, under favorable weather conditions, could produce as good tobacco as the northern section, and this season proves it."

One of the heaviest yields of tobacco is reported from the farm of R. B. Wandell, route 2, town of Harmony. The Gazette Farm department would be pleased to hear reports on the yields in southern Wisconsin.

EXPENSIVE BULL

Ever heard about the most expensive bull in the world? It is almost impossible to figure just how much he has cost.

Allow us to present Mr. Scrub Bull. He is in the class with the many other thieves who hang around your farm. You say there are no thieves on your farm—let's have a look around and see.

What are all those things over there in that field? Weeds—why sure enough. That's one form of thief that is lurking around, slowly but surely eating up profits.

And when you look one of your hours the other day, I hear, But this would only be a beginning in an attempt to enumerate the many petty bandits who are hanging around your farm, eating up profits, and causing weeds, disease of both plants and animals which could be prevented.

There are hundreds of petty thieves that are robbing Wisconsin farms every day and we are living right on the farm all of the time. That's gratitude for every one of these can be eliminated.

A farm account book and cow testing associations are excellent steps in establishing a permanent police force for keeping these petty thieves off the farm. This club police can be added to the force gradually to take care of the other crooks in the form of disease and weeds.

COOLIDGE MUST ACT ON SHIPPING

Prompt Move Is Held Imperative on Part of President to Save Fleet.

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1923 by Janesville Daily Gazette.

Washington—President Coolidge has come face to face with his first major problem—shipping policy. The president must act on the shipping bill which he has signed into law, or he will be forced to take action on the bill which he has signed into law, or he will be forced to take action on the bill which he has signed into law.

The president thus far has given the impression of a man who doesn't know what to do about it. He wants to tread cautiously and familiarize himself first with the whole matter. Unfortunately, the shipping bill is a complicated affair that a few conferences with Chairman Farley and the members of the shipping board will hardly give the president anything but a general impression of the bill.

Mr. Harding spent more time on the shipping question than any other subject. He went by that he did not work on it. Chairman Farley came into office with a distinct understanding that President Harding would follow a given policy. Mr. Coolidge is at liberty to change it and there are rumors that he wants to do so, but the truth is the president doesn't know enough about it to have such a rumor circulated. When he gets down to the bottom of it, he will approve what has been laid before him. He will do so because congress would never sanction the present method of operating government ships if it ever got at the facts. The new policy which Mr. Harding was about to put into effect was more in line with congressional sentiment than any plan that has yet been proposed. After all, the shipping board is not an executive department, but an independent establishment responsible to congress.

Public Wants Coal.

The temper of the nation seems to be that coal must be mined somehow and be marketed by some one. If the operators will not do it the public seems to be perfectly willing that the government should take charge and furnish the coal.
For the first time in years the operators and miners have been told plainly and without equivocation that coal must be mined and no non-sense about it. The willingness of the operators to abolish all debt collections at the pay window and the resultant agreement of the miners' union that the check-off would go along with the rest, is a great concession for both sides. Without the check-off system enforced the miners' union will not be able to keep its membership. Under the check-off, the dues to the union were withheld at the pay gate and no union officer had to worry about getting the dues. Now it will be managed now without the check-off is for the union to figure out. Suddenly the check-off has taken a secondary place to the question of wage which all along it has been asserted by the union was the least of the worries of mine union officials.
The wage question ought to be easier to settle than these other questions having to do with the very life of the union, since union heads have repeatedly stated that the organization could not be kept up unless by the force of the check-off, and the concession is therefore greatly emphasized.

The League of Nations seems to be troubled with pernicious anemia.

Spreading Janesville Goods.

The statement printed in the Gazette that Janesville would ship out of this city a hundred cars of manufactured cotton in a few weeks, was perhaps a revelation to some of the citizens of this city. But it is a fact that Janesville products are known all over the world and one can scarcely talk with a business man or a merchant in any city without discovering that the outsider knows much about Janesville and its manufacturing business. We go on from day to day and accept the things that are ours without giving much thought to the great spread of information that comes out of the factories of our city. These old and substantial manufacturing plants, which have gone on from year to year, giving employment, have done more than to merely operate a business—they have been building up a reputation for Janesville, reaching far. Cotton manufacture has been generally thought of in connection with New England and the south but here in the north we have been turning bales into finished product to a surprising extent. Raw cotton and cotton yarns make up an immense total in the course of the year in Wisconsin with mills like that at Janesville and the knitting mills elsewhere. One of the most interesting things which the pupils at the high school could have on the curriculum is a greater knowledge of the manufacturing industry of the home city.

The Chisel Squad is getting to work on Coolidge. He displeased at least 14 of our most distinguished cranks last week!

Giving Lieut. Gov. Comings a Certificate of Character.

The American Legion has had a few words to say about Lieutenant George F. Comings, and tagged him as he should be. They declare plainly and unequivocally, that he is unfit for public office. They cited the remarks of the lieutenant governor in reference to the "national guard of the state and term them "insulting." They might have gone farther and cited some of the statements made as to other tenets of the faith which Mr. Comings has. Wherever you find the red radicals gathered and opportunity for his presence there in a front seat, one will find George F. Comings. As between Blaine and Comings there is no question as to the choice of Blaine as a governor. Comings is a candidate against Mr. Blaine. It may be true, that Mr.
Blaine plays politics 24 hours a day and takes no rest on Sunday, but he is so far ahead of the lieutenant governor as a possibility in the chair of the chief executive that argument falters and fails.

Franklin Pierce was the last president from New England. He was a democrat and there was a world of trouble all through his administration.

Where Good and Bad Plays Go

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

New York.—When a theatrical production is staggering along on three legs, and box office receipts mean only gloomy news, the saying begins to go around among the company: "What I suppose next week this show'll be playing in Cain's Opera House."

The institution referred to is a warehouse in New York city. There are other theatrical warehouses besides this one in New York. Most of the important productions now have their own storage rooms for properties and scenery. But "playing in Cain's" is a stock expression for closing a show.

This old theatrical warehouse is accordingly a well known tradition, but very little more than the name is ever heard. The transfer and storage business of the theatrical world is not concluded along spectacular lines. Yet like almost everything connected with the stage it has a picturesque aspect.

It is still the dull season of midsummer to the average citizen, but actors and producers are bustling about preparing new fall plays, and launching them. Rehearsals are in full swing, and there is a great deal of moving and unpacking to be done. If a new show is opening here, it is the business of a transfer company to assemble the production from all over the city. The sets have been built in a carpenter shop. Scenery has been painted in a scene painter's studio. The original properties have been expectedly consigned to an electrical company's shops. The costumes are at dressmaking establishments, and the man who designed the scenic effects most likely has selected the interior decorations.

Some producers order all these things to be assembled at the theater only three days before the play opens. But, with so many theatrical offerings specializing in elaborateness, assembling a production is a sizable task. It is not unusual for a production to be put together two, or even three, weeks ahead. Two dress rehearsals precede an opening now, more often than one, and this means an earlier arrangement of the show's belongings.

As reviews and musical comedies depend so greatly on scenic and lighting effects and as so many changes of scene are made in the course of a performance it has been found that one rehearsal is not sufficient for the electricians and property men to master their parts. In a dramatic production, too, the success of the play may hinge on the precision with which these men work. A series of lighting effects badly timed or too much light on a mysterious scene may spoil the one big moment of the evening. So the producer has a dress rehearsal of the dress rehearsal, before the important event.

After he assembles the production, the theatrical moving man's next job comes when the show closes for the season, or goes on tour, or becomes permanently defunct. In any case from three to ten vans of furniture, trunks, and scenery are collected from the theater. There is rarely room to keep more than one regular production on a stage. Moreover, in this state and many others few regulations limit the amount of goods that may be kept about a theater. Consequently, as soon as a play closes it moves out.
If it goes on tour its possessions are loaded on one or two baggage cars, according to the pretentiousness of the offerings. Otherwise everything goes to the storeroom.

Cain's warehouse, which is typical of the public storage places, is not a romantic museum of relics from famous plays. In appearance it is very like any storage house. There are six floors, each packed with trunks, boxes, cases, and stacks of scenery. There are few unoccupied objects. The imagination is stirred mainly by small details.

One row of long, flat trunks and neatly painted green boxes bears the label of a famous musical review. This show has just closed here and will go on tour in a few weeks. The equipment of a man who specializes in freeing himself from all sorts of predicaments is here, packed in queerly shaped trunks. Other rows of trunks bear the names of well known plays. The labels, some neatly printed in large red letters and pasted on, some scrawled with crayon, bring up pictures of the productions and of the probable contents of the mysterious trunks. About fifty productions are stored in this warehouse at a time. Most of the labels are of plays not far back in theatrical history.

What becomes finally of all the abandoned productions, the spangle bedecked costumes, the balcony scenes, the twin beds so necessary to the modern farce? A play that runs only a week may close with its scenery and costumes but slightly damaged. It would seem that the producer might recover something on his investment by selling a perfectly good drawing room with fireplace and door leading to conservatory.

Joseph Klaw, president of the Cain company, says this isn't often possible. The trouble with the drawing room mentioned is that the door probably isn't in the right corner for any other play that may be produced in the near future.
Playwrights build their stories around future settings and every door and window must be located exactly according to the stage directions given. So even if the door fits the specifications of another play demanding a drawing room, most likely the second drama would require a secret panel where the five place stands. The result is that a $20,000 production is not often worth more than $500 when the play is done.

Electrical equipment can generally be used again. If period costumes are left over, the producer may sell them to a theatrical costumer.
But a stage career is hard on all costumes. They deteriorate quickly, how quickly may be imagined from the statement that if a play is going to a big city after a few months' run, the production has to be renewed with a great extent.

Properties have a brief, intense existence on the stage, too. "When a scene has to be changed in two minutes, perhaps without the curtain's being lowered, scene shifters have no time to handle objects with elaborate care. An example of the rougher treatment accorded stage properties occurred in a play where a table was broken by a falling sandbag at every performance, and a door had to be battered down with an axe. The top of the table and a certain panel of the door were faked in the sense that they were of light wood and renewed at every performance. In other instances, a chair that looks natural but has to be tossed about is reinforced with iron to lengthen its life. Ordinary stage furniture, however, is not much good after it has been used night after night in a bedroom farce or in a mystery thriller.

Rouge et Noir. Most of our great leaders in congress are in Paris studying international questions and sociology."

No policeman hereafter should be put on the force unless he wears a set of false teeth. In case some drunken highbrow attack him he can slip the teeth into his pocket before making the arrest. Or if he is hit suddenly he can replace them at less cost than Pat Sclim will have to pay for a new set.

The mixture of hooch and automobiles continues to be more fatal than war. It will be noticed that the cities noted for moonshine and bootleggers have the most accidents with automobiles.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE COMMON PATH
Oh, I shall travel out today And tread a well-worn lane, Shall walk a long-familiar way Out there and back again;
But though I know the path I go, Today, perchance, I'll see Somewhere a new-born rose aglow To cheer the heart of me.

I know the men that I shall meet, I know the women, too,
I've met them all upon the street, They're old but ever new;
And I must be a child smile At me along the way.
Or someone, e'er I've gone a mile,
A cheerful word shall say.

Perhaps the sun shall light a tree With some new touch of flame—Although this path is old to me, It's never just the same;
And I may meet a stranger there Who'll ask the time of day, Or hear a baby cry the first As soldiers march away.

I know the buildings, one by one,
The corners where they turn, But always as I wander on There's something new to learn;
And when I leave my door behind, Whatever the day may be,
There's always something new to find And something new to see.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON

Nikita Baloff, director of Russian vaudeville, who has enjoyed the hospitality and protection of this country for two years, said, upon taking steamer for Europe: "The Americans dance without temperance. Without playfulness, without coquetry." But that is rather weaker than the criticisms to which we have been subjected. He is a European standard. But he did manage to criticize us.

Over in New Jersey the other night an actress fainted on the stage because her costume was too heavy. Personally I have not seen a show like that must be in a good many years.

We have no protest to make against modern poetry, provided we are not obliged to read it.

Who's Who Today

G. BASCOM SLEMP

The recent appointment by President Coolidge of former congressman G. Bascom Slomp of Virginia, to be his secretary not only makes the president's side of the most influential republicans of the south, but apparently gives Coolidge an alliance with the forces of former Gov. Lowden of Illinois.

Mr. Slomp is wealthy. For many years he was the lone republican congressman from any southern state. He was an important figure in national republican conventions. His ability to rally southern delegates has made him famous. He has generally been considered the republican patronage arbiter of Virginia.

Details of Mr. Slomp's history are given in the statement issued from the White House in connection with his appointment. This statement says in part:
"G. Bascom Slomp, of Lee county, Virginia, born in 1870; he graduated from the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in 1891 and studied law at the University of Virginia; taught mathematics at the Virginia military institute, 1900 and 1901, and practiced law at Lexington, Va., thereafter."
"He is president of the Slomp Coal Co., the Hamilton Realty Co., and other corporations. He has been chairman of the republican state committee of Virginia since 1905. Mr. Slomp's father, Hon. Campbell Bascom Slomp, was a member of congress from 1869 to 1875."
"Owing to his long congressional service, he is one of the most widely acquainted men in public life. He is a bachelor."

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Aug. 20, 1883.—School will start Sept. 3 and run for 38 weeks, it was decided by the Board of Education at a special meeting last night.
Mr. John M. Whitehead, late of Chicago, has opened a law office, the Chicago black and copying the rooms recently vacated by Dinko and Hayner. He is a graduate of Yale, and is a very accomplished gentleman and a good lawyer.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Aug. 20, 1893.—Residents of the second ward were aroused this morning when a family was walking into the city and asked for bread. The four had walked all the way from Fond du Lac and were without food. All their possessions they carried in a wheelbarrow, and they slept under the stars. The early St. Paul train to Chicago will be discontinued because of lack of business.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Aug. 20, 1903.—Tomorrow will be Janesville day at the Beloit Inter State fair, and a record-breaking crowd is being looked for. Secretary Follock says he expects a delegation of 1,000 from the Bowler City Ninety-six are present at the reunion of the Thirtieth Regiment, being held today in the G. A. R. hall and the court house.

TEN YEARS AGO

Aug. 20, 1913.—Janesville had 41 fewer children of school age than it had last year, the recently-completed census shows. The toll is 3-808. It was taken by S. C. Burnham, clerk.
A compromise has been effected in the differences between Mayor Pathe's, City Engineer C.
V. Kerch and officials of the city department in regards to the new Milwaukee street bridge.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

IS REDUCTION HEALTHFUL?

Any one who is overweight over-eats; it is not only harmful but beneficial to health for any one who is overweight to reduce by the natural process, which is simply a reversal of the unnatural process responsible for the excessive weight.

A child in his teens, living a natural life, that is, eating and drinking every day, needs as much food as his father who works every day or perhaps merely boards at home and hires housework. (Not that I would play father up as the martyr of modern home life, for goodness knows there are no files on father when it comes to giving his way through life without any real work.) The point I mean to make is that the growing boy or girl needs a generous ration for growing and building, with which father and mother are all through.
That accounts for the shocking appetite of the normal youngster.

The usual cause of obesity is a sad combination of a working appetite or eating habit with a shirking of exercise. The remedy is keeping up exercise by diet and exercise. In some cases other means are advisable, with or without restriction of diet and regulation of exercise, but in general, and for other means than diet and exercise be safely undertaken without the attendance and control of your own physician.

An intelligent adult man, however, safely and successfully can arrange for himself or herself a reduction regimen based upon diet and exercise, or upon diet alone, though exercise alone is seldom satisfactory. The reduction of a man by under 10 years of age should attempt reduction by any means whatever without the sanction of his or her own family physician.
The reason why youngsters should not attempt reduction is that their attempts may seriously interfere with natural growth and building operations and so work grave injury to health.

"Reducing diet" can be intelligently laid down for promiscuous use, for a regimen, which would be suitable for a person aged 30, 63 inches, tall, weighing 150 lbs., of a family might be quite inadequate for a person 40, 61 inches tall, teaching school, or it might bring increase in weight for a person aged 50, 63 inches, tall, embroidering cassioles.

If you are thinking of adopting some healthful reduction regimen or plan I'll be pleased to send you some information, or, if you prefer, to discuss with your request a stamped addressed envelope and give your name.

Q. Where did the word "booze" come from?

A. The word "booze" is said to be an English adaptation of corruption of the Turkish word "Bekich," used in Syria to include sherberts and similar drink drinks.

Q. What is the National Transportation Institute?

A. According to articles of incorporation filed with the Illinois secretary of state the National Transportation Institute is to conduct non-partisan and impartial investigations into all kinds of transportation questions and to disseminate the facts so acquired to the public.

Q. How can I get the best cotton picking season end?

A. Unless the crop is unusually late, cotton picking begins in the extreme south of Texas during the inter half of July, and it continues generally until mid-winter, as the ripening process is a continuous one and the plant must be picked over three and sometimes four or more times.

Q. How can I get the best cotton picking season end?

A. There have been 90 awards of the congressional medals of honor to officers and enlisted men of the United States army and navy during the world war, and one award to the unknown soldier of each of the following allied nations: Great Britain, Belgium, France, Italy, and Rus-

Q. What kind of tree produces cork?

A. This material is the bark of the cork oak (Quercus suber). All bark is partially made up of cork, but in cork oak this tissue attains unusual thickness. Cork is composed of walls of dead cells filled with air, rendering it very light, the specific gravity being only 0.24. It is elastic, tough and im-permeable, which renders it useful for stoppers for bottles, floats for nets and life preservers.

The Riddle of the Spinning Wheel

By M. E. and T. W. HANSHEW

Being an Exploit in the Career of Hamilton Cleek, Detective Copyright, 1922, by Doubleday Page & Co., and published by arrangement with McClure Newspaper Syndicate, of New York City.

SYNOPSIS.
In a deadly search for the lives of her father and others in the Duggan home at Ayton castle, Maud Duggan seeks help from Scotland Yard. Hamilton Cleek, under the name of "Beland," takes up the attempt to solve the mystery of the spinning wheel. On occasions and without the aid of human hands starts running. Invariably a death follows. The head of the household is the old Irishman, Sir Andrew Duggan, his son by a first wife, the daughter and a second wife—a French woman and her son, Cyril. It is believed that the wife is plotting for the death of all in order that her son may be the heir. Cleek, who has made a number of acquaintances and finds that Ross, the second wife's father, is a man of considerable means. He has made his father angry by lighting the house with electricity and riddling the walls with shot. It is believed that the second wife is attempting to have Ross disinherited and her family gathered in the Duggan home. Hamilton Cleek, who is a detective, is a man of considerable means. "Lo, sir," Dollops's voice was choking with joyful emotion. "If you go and throw any more buckets at me, me chest will expand that big wiv pride as they be spittin' us. I'm glad I've made up for that footin' mistle over the ivy."

Gawd! Look, Gynnor—look! Go's this a woman? A woman, strike me pink, if it ain't! And a lady, too, from the cut of 'er. Now, 'oo in 'eavin' nyme is she? Her pointing finger brought Cleek's eyes instantly into the line of it, and Cleek's face in the moonlight went suddenly pale. Dollops's eyes rested on the grim mask of his face, plainly visible from the moon's rays. Then, at a sign from Cleek, he ducked his head into the grass and lay motionless, as his master had already done.

And by the sound of the soft foot-steps, coming from somewhere behind them, Cleek and his companion knew that the woman had reached the spot where they were lying hidden under the great clump of yew. Then a hand reached down and touched Cleek softly upon the shoulder, and a woman's voice spoke into the darkness with a tone in it, and at sound of it every nerve in his body lightened like wire for the tenseness of the situation.

"Ross," said the woman's voice tenderly, "Ross dear, get up—get up! I followed you here tonight, because I—I wanted to talk with you. I had to talk with you, to tell you something. I simply had to. But I've been fool to break parole, as you have done, with that man with the hawk eyes in the castle even at this minute. But so much have I loved you, I must look up and speak to you, and whoever your companion is, tell him to go away until we have had a word together. Look up, look up—do!"

CHAPTER XXIV
Hunt and Hounds

To say that Cleek was startled was to underestimate the factor altogether. Here was a pretty kettle of fish indeed! It took exactly three seconds for him to act, and to act in such an extraordinary fashion as to call forth a gasp from Dollops, whose head was still half ducked, with one arm upthrown to hide it from the woman's eyes, and to register in his loyal heart the fact that this master whom he served was a miracle-worker indeed.

For Cleek's hand had flung up in the darkness and he, the woman, still continued to stare at him in her soft voice Dollops, peering through the upthrown arm, saw the features of the man he loved writhe suddenly as though they had been made of rubber, saw him twitch up his hand and muffle his coat-collar about his neck, and then realized with a gasp that here at his side lay such a fair representative of Ross Duggan as might even be mistaken for that gentleman in this dark hour of the night.

And from the lips of this astonishing person proceeded Ross Duggan's voice, with its curious clipped Scotch inflection, and then the man he loved cleared the throat which was so indicative of the man, and which Dol-lops—trained as he was by Cleek's quick observation—had almost looked for himself in the couple of times he had seen and listened unseen to the gentleman.

He saw Cleek get to his feet and twitch his shoulders up and his cap down, as he faced the lady in her dark wrap through which the glimmer of some light salaried material showed like a line of fire.

"My dear girl," said Ross Duggan's voice, a trifle testily, "what a fool you are to come out here at this time—if you'll excuse my saying so! Sit down, for heaven's sake, if you must be here, and don't let those men down there see you. I'm making some observations of my own, but at any minute someone may come up here—and I wouldn't answer for the consequences. You've fallen into a hornet's nest, Catherine, and only a woman with some desperate plan of action would do that. Don't you know what's being carried on down here?"

She shook her dark head, and dropped instantly into a little heap of satin and dark-colored velvet beside him in the darkness.

"No," she whispered softly, "I wondered what you were doing, and when your companion came, I thought you might be in a hurry to go. Send him away, Ross. I must speak with you alone!"

"Very well, Thomas," retorted the man of letters, "go ahead and prove it, then."

"Only yesterday you gave me a sound thrashing," said Thomas; "I suppose the other pupils play it, and don't you think for a minute that I didn't feel it?"—Cleveland News.

A farmer rode into a middle western town, and inquired of the first man he met where he could find an undertaker, says Judge.

"An undertaker?" the man asked. "Is there some one read at your school?"

"No, there is no one dead," replied the farmer, "but my wife is pretty sick."

"Well, then," the man advised, "you want a doctor, not an undertaker."

"No," said the farmer, "what I want is an undertaker. You know, I have joined the Co-ops, and we have out out the middlemen."

A poorly nourished dietitian was telling a mother that she must have her children eat porridge, milk, fruit and vegetables, according to Social Service.

In response to the suggestion that the children disliked those foods, the visitor said he had been raised on them. "Well," said the mother, "you ain't no ad for them."
